

Dear Readers,

First, let me wish you all a Very Happy New Year on behalf of the entire LINUX For You team.

To start off this year with a BIG BANG, we have for you the distro that many of our readers keep asking for—Fedora's latest release! Along with it comes a brief review of Fedora 10, interviews with Fedora's project leader, Paul Fields, and Max Spevack (the guy who heads the community architecture team), a feature on Fedora's Indian community, and more.

For those of you who are into IT management, there's an additional bonanza—our issue theme focused on network monitoring and management. Apart from the latest editions of the top FOSS solutions related to this theme that have been packed onto the LFY CD, we also have four articles that should empower you to manage IT better.

Every time we approach the New Year, the buzz at LINUX For You increases—all thanks to Open Source India (a.k.a. LinuxAsia). Yes, it's time for us to start finalising the speakers' list and push sponsors to fund the event. Thankfully, some inroads have already been made this year.

The 2009 edition of OSI is going to be held at Chennai from 12th to 14th March. The venue is the Chennai Trade Centre, and the event is titled 'Open Source India Tech Days', which we believe best symbolises the heightened focus on the content and the target audience of this edition. Our primary audience is going to be IT managers and software developers. But plans are being finalised to reach out to newbies too.

It is to be our first time in Chennai, but going by the response we have received so far from our readers and open source followers in the region, it seems OSI Tech Days is going to be an event that will be remembered for all the right reasons.

Since 2003, when this event was launched as LinuxAsia, our mission has been to create a platform that enables an increase in the development and adoption of open source in India, and in Asia.

We invite your views and support to achieve that mission.

Best wishes!
