

Top Online Training Certifications for AI and ML

This article lists the best places to acquire AI and ML certification along with the USPs of the various schools listed. It is an enlightening read for freshers and professionals seeking to advance in their chosen fields and for those who want to venture into new fields.

With education going online and being made available from some of the world's best institutions, those of us who are constant learners could exploit the current lockdown to study further. An exhaustive list of options is featured here.

The Best Artificial Intelligence Certifications [2020]

1. Artificial Intelligence (Northwestern University | Kellogg School of Management)

This course has been created for individuals looking forward to learning about the strategies and techniques of artificial intelligence to solve business problems. After the fundamentals are covered, you will understand how AI is impacting different industries as well as the various tools used for developing efficient solutions. By the end of the programme, you will have numerous strategies under your belt that can be used to improve the performance of your organisation.

USPs

- Learn to manage customer expectations and develop AI models accordingly.
- Multiple case studies that allow you to get a better understanding of the challenges faced in the real world.
- Get answers to your queries from a dedicated support team.
- Complete the exercises and get feedback on your performance.
- Work with data based on real-life case studies.
- Pass the exam with at least 80 per cent to earn the certification.

2. Machine Learning (ML) AI Certification by Stanford University (Coursera)

If learning ML is your objective, then there is no need to look further. Created by Andrew Ng, a professor at Stanford University, more than 2,612,800 students and professionals who enrolled in this programme from around the globe have rated it very highly. This course provides an introduction to

