A query related to Ubuntu installation

Currently I am running Ubuntu 10.04 on my laptop. I want to change the kernel from 32 bit to 64 bit. Can you suggest ways in which I can do this?

—Nathan, mnathan@gmail.com

ED: You need to reinstall the OS with a 64-bit edition of Ubuntu 10.04. Hope this helps!

Regarding procuring LFY editions in Mumbai

I am a regular reader of LFY but find it difficult to procure it every month as there is only one vendor who stocks the magazine in Chembur, Mumbai. Kindly send some addresses of vendors where I can pick it up in Mumbai.

—Nirmal Mathew, mathew.nirmal@gmail.com

ED: Dear Nirmal, while we will email you the details related to other outlets in Mumbai from where you can buy LFY, a better solution would be to subscribe to the magazine. This way you will get the magazine at your doorstep, in the first week of the month itself.

If you wish to subscribe, then please let us know. We will be happy to assist you. You can also subscribe online by clicking at the following link: <http://www.linuxforu.com/subscribe-to-the-print-edition-of-linux-for-you/>

OSI 2010 special subscription offer

I recently attended the OSI 2010 conference at Chennai. And after visiting your stall there, considered taking the one-year subscription for Rs 600 (which comes without CDs and gifts). I thought it was a good offer. Subsequently, when I spoke to your customer service executive there, I was told that the same scheme would be available online after the OSI conference for the attendees. So I didn't take the subscription at your pavilion. Unfortunately, when I later went through the online subscription page, I could not find any option to subscribe to this scheme.

—Rajesh V, rajeshv@gmail.com

ED: Since you attended OSI 2010, we will offer this subscription scheme to you as a special gesture. We have notified our subscription department of your interest and have requested them to offer you what was being offered to attendees at OSI 2010, i.e., a 50 per cent rebate.

I want to subscribe to LFY along with CDs/DVDs. Could you tell me how can I do so online and what the longest subscription period is? I also want the November 2010 edition. Also, please suggest a Torrent client that works on Linux.

—Shabbir Akhtar, theblogdate@gmail.com

ED: Please write to efycirc4@efyindia.com to know about the latest and longest subscription offer running for LFY.

Most of the Linux flavours have their own Torrent client, but I think Azureus runs on all OSs. It's the best, to my understanding.

I just installed the DVD of Ubuntu 10.10 (both GNOME and KDE versions), which I received along with the November 2010 edition of LFY. Thank you! It is good fun. Keep up the good work, guys!

How do I participate in the Fedora Scholarship programme (<http://bit.ly/dwIgcK>) that is aimed at encouraging open source innovation?

—Aman Allen

ED: Here is the link to the site where you may find the relevant information: http://fedoraproject.org/wiki/Scholarship#How_to_apply and you could e-mail the required details to scholarship@fedoraproject.org. Hope this helps.

Errata

- In the article titled, Google App Inventor: Develop Android Apps in a Jiffy, published in the November 2010 edition of LFY, Android 1.6 was incorrectly associated with the codename 'Eclair'. It should have been 'Donut'.
- In the article titled, Linux Device Drivers for Your Girlfriend, published in the November 2010 edition of the magazine, the sub-title on Page 62 was erroneously published as 'Multiple-vertical drivers'. The correct sub-title should have been 'Multiple-vertical interface drivers'. Also, there were a few errors in Figure 2 and Figure 3 on Page 62.

The errors are deeply regretted.
