Ideas to ponder over, and write!

I have been a frequent reader of LFY since the inception of the magazine. I wish the magazine would be 'Free' (as in beer) someday! Jokes apart, I really love the way the magazine has evolved over the years. There are three particular requests that I would want the team to address:

1. Since this is the age of set-top boxes and digital recorders hogging the limelight, I would like to see a section which includes a tutorial on how to build your own digital home theatre—starting from the hardware to the software. I know Mythbuntu has the potential to deliver the same. But I want to know how it is done in detail.
2. I would like to know if there are any banking-specific software developed in Linux, and also how can Linux change the future of banking—not only in terms of architectural deployment but also in a software and customer-centric situation. I would also like to see an article on this published every month.
3. Can you please publish an article on using Linux in cars? I have purchased a Chevy Beat and desperately want to add Linux flavour to it (something like the Knight Rider!). Lastly, thanks for the previous edition's videos on Gimp.

Hope to see many such tutorials of different software on a separate CD.

ED: First, thanks for the pat on the back. Messages like these surely lift our spirits and motivate us to do better.

Second, we have noted the story ideas proposed, and will try and share them with internal and external authors. Hopefully, someone will have the expertise to write on them—soon.

Third, we invite all our readers to share their feedback on some of the challenges discussed in your e-mail.

Offer to promote LFY

I am a regular subscriber of LFY magazine since years. I really love the magazine because of the quality of the information it gives. Whenever I've shared the magazine with my friends, most of them have been excited about all that it covers. But a few have been surprised that they didn't know about an informative magazine like this.

Considering this, I would like to promote the magazine. If you give me a chance to promote your site I can place a banner for your site on my Web pages. You can see the results and the number of hits you are getting from my site and then decide to continue this; we can look at payment options down the line. I look forward to receiving your support. Thanks in advance.

ED: We will be more than happy to receive your support in promoting LFY. Someone from the LFY team will soon get in touch with you to share some Web banner advertisements with you. However, if you feel that we need to change the message, do let us know. We are ready to experiment and see what works best, with the tech community.
