

Amazon planning an app store based on Google's Android

On the lines of Apple and Google, Amazon is also planning to open an application store, and this is reportedly going to run on Android's mobile platform. The developers contributing to this store are likely to get 70 per cent of the revenue, which is similar to what Apple offers to its developers. Android, which boasts of more than 80,000 apps in the Android Market, is fast gaining traction in competition with Apple's App Store.

Ari Jaaksi quits Nokia

Ari Jaaksi, vice president of Nokia's MeeGo devices, has left the company. His departure follows the replacement of CEO Olli-Pekka Kallasvuo by the former head of Microsoft's Office division Stephen Elop and the exit of another senior manager, Anssi Vanjoki. Jaaksi had managed the development of the Maemo operating system and the devices that used it. Maemo was merged with Intel's Moblin mobile operating system earlier this year to create the Linux Foundation-managed MeeGo. A MeeGo version for netbooks has been released and its mobile version has been previewed. But MeeGo is yet to appear in a Nokia device.

Ari Jaaksi

Lee Williams

Symbian head quits

The Symbian Foundation has announced that its executive director, Lee Williams, has left the company, with immediate effect. Chief financial officer, Tim Holbrow, has now taken over as executive director. Symbian cited 'personal reasons' for Williams' exit, and wished him all the best in his future ventures.
