

You said it...

This month, we feature feedback received from some of the authors who contribute content to LINUX For You. They shared with us what they like about this magazine and the improvements that they would like to see in it.

Put the archives online for free download and reading

I really like reading articles on the latest open source technologies, tips and tricks and interviews of experts in the domain. As regards suggestions for improvements, it would be great if the old editions of the magazine are made available for free download or free reading. The team can also consider adding some projects to the edition. This may prove useful for young FOSS enthusiasts and students. I also recommend a section on innovative ideas.

—Amol Verule, averule@gmail.com

ED: Thanks for the words of appreciation. As regards putting the content online, we are shortly planning to launch the eZine version of the magazine. Keep watching this space, or LFY's Facebook fanpage for an update on this front. Your suggestion on including projects in the magazine is good. We will discuss it internally to evaluate how this can be implemented. If you have any specific suggestions in this regard, please do share those with us.

The magazine's 'India focus' is a USP

The magazine features nice articles on diverse subjects. I also look forward to receiving your DVDs of distros. LFY's India-focus also gives the publication an edge. In my opinion, to make the magazine even more appealing to readers, we can probably add a buyers' guide covering products such as the latest laptops, netbooks, tablets and desktops in every issue, along with the prices. It will also be good if the magazine includes DVDs containing video tutorials.

—Niyam Bhushan, niyambhushan@gmail.com

ED: Niyam, many thanks for sharing your observations and suggestions. We do regularly talk about Linux- or open source-run products in the magazine under the 'FOSS For Everyone-Review' or 'Players' sections. Tutorials are also published on a regular basis. So we will surely evaluate the viability of adding a buyers' guide and video tutorials in the magazine.

Make LFY available on news stands by the 1st of every month

I feel LINUX For You is a complete magazine on FOSS that caters to the interests of readers across different sections. Whether a person is new to the Linux and open source world or a professional—the magazine has something to offer to each of the readers. Each edition helps in learning something new and different. FossBytes is my favourite section in the magazine as it provides the latest round-up of open source technologies and tools. The magazine's presence on the social media is also going from strength to strength.

For a wonderful magazine like LFY, it would be great if the latest edition is made available on the stands by the 1st of every month. The team can also consider including information on the new development projects so that readers get to know of these and contribute to the projects of their interest. Also, it would be good to include information regarding the upcoming open source events happening around the globe.

—Ankur Aggarwal, coolankur2006@gmail.com

I think LINUX For You is one of its kind. However, to improve further, it would be good if the publishing date of the magazine is kept constant and once the magazine comes off press, an e-mail should be sent out to regular readers so that they know what to expect from the edition.

—Basil Skariah, basil.s@directi.com

ED: Dear Ankur and Basil, it is heartening to know that you enjoy the magazine. Thanks a tonne for your appreciative feedback. As regards your suggestion on making the magazine available on the news stands early every month, we have already advanced the dates to send the magazine to press and hopefully you will be able to find the latest edition on the stands on the first week of every month.

Ankur, we already carry the information regarding FOSS events happening in India in our regular feature 'FOSSBytes'. Regarding including information about international open source events, I will pass on your suggestion to the editorial team.

Suggestions regarding the CD content

I really like the interactive, reader-friendly and no-nonsense approach of the magazine. Another attraction each month is the DVD of one or the other of the latest distros. I also appreciate the prompt manner in which