

Editorial

Dear readers

Open Source India (OSI) is just around the corner. It's happening at Chennai's Trade Centre from September 19-21, 2001.

With over 2500 delegates last year, four parallel tracks and many workshops, OSI established itself as the leader amongst open source events in India. This year, the event promises to be even BIGGER!

The line-up of international experts who will be speaking at OSI Days 2010 is unbelievable. Some of the world's top gurus are descending on Chennai. Take a look at osidays.com or at our curtain raiser on pages 18, 19, 21, 23 & 25.

First, let's look at what's new. This year, we have dedicated tracks on PHP and Drupal. We are flying in international and Indian experts to ensure that Indian developers get access to world-class content at an affordable price. We also have workshops on exciting topics like 'Developing apps for Android' and 'Developing apps for iPhone, using Open Source!' Now isn't that worth its weight in gold?

The tracks that were a big hit last year will run this year, too. If you want to know about the latest trends, tools and best practices while developing Web apps (using open source), we have a dedicated one-day track for you on September 20. If you are looking for something similar to develop mobile apps, then a dedicated track awaits you on September 21. For hands-on IT implementers who want to get the latest on 'How to set up and manage IT infrastructure' using open source, there's another dedicated track on September 20.

But the biggest session is on Day One—19th September (a Sunday!), when we have the FOSS For Everyone track. This is when the keynote addresses will happen. The star speakers will shine, and you will get to hear about what's new and exciting in the world of FOSS.

The good news is that these four tracks (Web-apps, mobile-apps, IT implementation and FOSS for Everyone) are all accessible with the Silver Pass, which is FREE!

While we released the first 500 Silver Passes in early July, and got all of them registered within 20 days of the registration section going live, we have been releasing more in batches, as more sponsors keep signing on. On August 20, we released an additional 500 Silver Passes. By the time you read this, that batch might also be over, but you can still get lucky—we just might release more batches.

If the Silver Passes run out, go for the free Entry Pass. While you may not be able to access the Software Developer or IT Implementers' track, you will get access to the FOSS for Everyone track and the Expo. Plus, more sessions and workshops might get announced for Entry Pass visitors.

"Some of the world's top gurus are speaking at OSI Days 2010"

To stay up to date about OSI, connect through Facebook (<http://facebook.com/OSIDays>) or Twitter (<http://twitter.com/OSIDays>).

Looking forward to meeting you at Chennai,

Best wishes,

Rahul Chopra
Editor, LFY
rahul@efyindia.com

PS: Oh! There's an additional advantage in registering for the Silver Pass or the Entry Pass—you get special discounts on the workshops and the paid tracks.