

“
We do not compete
with Linux.
If anything,
we compete
with Linux
vendors.”

With initiatives like the Imagine Cup and PhoneGap Meetup, Microsoft is surely taking many steps forward to engage with open source communities across the globe, including India. At the sidelines of OSI Days 2011, Gianugo Rabellino, senior director of Open Source Communities, Microsoft, and Mandar Naik, director, Platform Strategy, Microsoft, spoke to Rahul Chopra, editor, LINUX For You, on Microsoft's openness to open source, and its key strategies to befriend application developers for mobile platforms, the Azure project, et al.

Gianugo Rabellino,
senior director of Open Source Communities,
Microsoft, USA