

YOU SAID IT

Open Source For You is cool!

Sourav Goswami:

I just heard about your new 'Open Source For You' cover that was promoted in the May 2012 issue. Although I haven't purchased that edition as yet, I was curious to know if this cover title has been finalised?

In case you have changed it, I feel it's a better idea as it represents the community in a more fair way!
Keep up the good work.

LINUX For You: Your words are really encouraging, Sourav! No, the Open Source For You title for the cover has not yet been completely finalised but yes, we too believe that it represents the entire open source community fairly.

The May issue rocked!

Nitish Bangera:

LFY's May 2012 issue was the best in months. I loved every article. Please keep up the same quality of articles.

LINUX For You: Thanks for the praise Nitish! We really appreciate it. Do keep sharing your feedback and letting us know how we could improve the quality of our magazine further.

Ordering LFY online

Mahesh Sale:

I would like a copy of the LFY March 2012 issue. How do I get it? Can I order it online? If so, please give me the link.

LINUX For You: Please visit this link, <http://bit.ly/jebOno>. Click on the LFY magazine tab and then choose the '1 month 1 copy' option. Follow this up with a mail to support@efyindia.com requesting a copy for the LFY March 2012 issue.

No DVDs please

Naveen Kumar:

Please provide an option to buy the magazine without the DVD/CD. I am a regular buyer of several books, especially related to computers and, of late, I haven't even been able to try out any of their DVDs/CDs. The end result is that all these CDs pile up as waste.

LINUX For You: We appreciate your suggestion, Naveen! In fact, many of our readers have come up with similar requests. However, for every person who does not want the DVD, there are two (or more) who demand it. Hence, may we suggest that you switch to the ezine version of the magazine, since there are no DVDs with it. Plus, you will get more issues to read for the same price! For more on our ezines, check out ezine.efyindia.com.

ERRATA

- In the May 2012 issue of LINUX For You, under the banner 'A-Z List Of Training and Certification Providers' on Pg 94, the name of Amrita Technologies was wrongly printed as Amrita Institute of Computer Technology (AICT). We regret the error.
- In the May 2012 issue of LINUX For You, under the banner 'Fossbytes' on Pg 14, the news titled, 'Now Ubuntu for Eyewear!' was actually a prank played on April Fool's Day. Due to an error, the last few lines were skipped. The last lines of the news item read as follows, 'Canonical has designed the page beautifully, giving a clear glimpse of what Ubuntu for Eyewear will look like. A pair of spectacles is connected to a battery shown in the bottom of its page. And did anyone notice the date written on the battery? It's 010412! Yes, you got it right. You have been fooled by Canonical in the most technologically innovative way! Prakash Advani, regional manager, Asia Pacific, Canonical, confirmed that Canonical had played a prank on April Fool's Day!'
