

Intel committed to open source technology

Lava International recently launched its Android-based smartphone, the XOLO X900, which is the world's first phone with Intel inside.

Mike Bell, vice president, Intel Architecture Group and general manager, Mobile and Communications Group, Intel, said, "Android is what customers are asking for right now. Android has a fabulous open eco-system where people are allowed to participate in terms of fixing bugs and making changes as per their choice. I think at the end of the day, it is the open eco-system that will win. I think Android does a fantastic job in giving that freedom to its users. One of the advantages of using Android is that we can do as good a job as we want to, and that too, as quickly as we want—based upon our ability and our commitment. So Android makes us 'in-charge' of our destiny, if I may say so."

However, Intel has not restricted itself to Android for its future opportunities. The company is ready to join hands with other operating systems as well.

An OpenBSD 5.1 UNIX-like OS released

The free BSD-based UNIX-like operating system, OpenBSD 5.1, is now available for download. The 5.1 version includes better hardware support, performance improvements, new features, as well as package upgrades, along with support for the NAT64 network address translation mechanism.

The NAT64 addition to packet filter (pf) in OpenBSD 5.1 will allow pf to translate data packets between the IPv6 and IPv4 Internet protocols. It will also allow IPv6-only hosts to communicate with IPv4 servers.

The new version has an improved IPv6 with better fragment handling, support for Synaptics' touch pads and Intel's Sandy Bridge graphics cards. It also has an upgraded desktop environment with GNOME 3.2.1, KDE 3.5.10 and Xfce 4.8.3.

Users can support the project by purchasing the new version on three CDs for approximately US$ 50 or by making a donation.

Are You In Suspense?

Are you wondering what happened to your order or payment, even after a fortnight? But did you mention your name and address clearly while sending payment, and what the payment was for?

We get several payments every month without adequate instructions or even identity of the person sending the payment. As a result we are unable to take appropriate action on these, till we get a complaint - if at all.

At EFY, we want you to be our satisfied customer. So please do let us know in case your payment or instructions are not even acknowledged within a fortnight. We are not that lazy!
