

YOU SAID IT

Highlights of the magazine needed in advance

It would be great if you could list the contents of the upcoming LINUX For You magazine and DVD well in advance, on your website. Most of the time, I have to go to the news stand to check out the DVD. Besides, many of us don't have broadband and depend upon the distros on DVDs for updates. Also, I wanted to know if you would be featuring Ubuntu 12.04 in one of your forthcoming issues?

—Arun,
codemaverik@gmail.com

ED: Thanks for sharing your concern with us! You can check out all the major highlights, including the contents of the LFY DVD and special features of the upcoming issue on our Facebook portal, <http://www.facebook.com/LinuxForYou> and have a look at the 'Photos' section. You can get a sneak peak into the upcoming issue's cover, contents page, DVD and Codechef puzzle, even before it hits the news stands!

We have also started coming up with a small section on 'LFY Magazine Attractions During 2012-13', which showcases the theme for every month in the year. That would help you decide which issue you definitely do not want to miss, and you can even come up with article ideas in case you wish to write on that theme.

And last but not the least, there's another bit of good news for you! We have featured the Ubuntu 12.04 in the DVD that is bundled with the current, i.e., June 2012 issue. Hope this helps.

Applause for the introduction to localisation

I read your article titled 'Localisation: An Introduction' in the April 2012 edition of the magazine and found it very interesting. For the first time, I came to know about Indian Linux flavours like Rangoli and the importance of localisation. I develop small applications and websites as a hobby, and would like to read the entire series of your articles in the forthcoming issues of LFY.

—Uday Mittal,
mittal.ud@gmail.com

ED: Thanks for your feedback. We are thrilled to know that the article matched your interest and we will be passing on your compliments to the author, Arjuna Rao Chavala. Also, your wish has been fulfilled! The second part of the article has been published in this issue of the magazine itself. So, happy reading!

Accolades via linuxforu.com

For 'Web 3.0: Building the Semantic Web'

I would really like to thank the author of the article, 'Web 3.0: Building the Semantic Web' that was published in the April 2012 issue of the magazine, for coming up with such a great introduction to the topic! It was a great read.

—Guest

ED: We are delighted to know that you found this article useful. We shall certainly convey your words of appreciation to the author, Ankit Mathur.

For 'Impress an Audience with Your Presentation'

I had seen Impress.js earlier too. But it was only after reading the article 'Impress an Audience with your Presentation', which was carried in the April 2012 issue of the magazine, that I realised that it was a good starting point to making presentations myself!

—Ranjit Mishra

ED: We are happy to know about this and we will inform the author, Gaurav Paliwal, about your appreciation. Hope this helps you and our readers to come up with cool presentations!

facebook CORNER

A request for an Android special

Vivek Mishra:

I heard that the LFY team is going to add a new section on Android. When can we expect that?

LINUX For You: We do try our best to include at least one Android related article in every issue of the magazine. The last issue has an article on Android App Development. In fact, the theme for the current, i.e., June 2012 edition of the magazine, is Android! So this edition is loaded with some interesting articles on Google's mobile OS that we hope you will enjoy!