

YOU SAID IT

A 'Yes' to the Drupal philosophy...

I really enjoyed reading Dries Buytaert's interview that was published in the January issue of LINUX For You. The fact that Buytaert believes in the 'working with, rather than against' philosophy, makes him a gentleman who will be readily accepted by the Indian open source and Drupal community. Today, there's no stopping Drupal in the educational and blogging spheres in India. Already, there are many websites created using Drupal, which are running successfully.

But what India really needs is trained Drupal developers. Spot on, LFY! Cheers to the title of the interview, 'India needs thousands of trained Drupal developers.' I couldn't agree more! With people who truly understand Drupal and open source, the development costs of websites for SMEs are bound to come down. Great for India, great for Drupal!

—Ronak Baldha,
ronak.baldha@gmail.com

ED: It was a pleasure to go through your note. Yes, we too believe in the immense potential of Drupal in India :-). We are glad that you enjoyed reading the interview. We will pass on your words of appreciation to the interviewer/author of the article, Diksha Gupta.

Thanks for sharing your views with us!

A request for the PDF version

How can we get the PDF versions of the LFY magazine?

—Aboobacker M K, via <http://www.facebook.com/LinuxForYou>

ED: Unfortunately, we don't have the facility to provide PDF versions of the magazine, as yet. However, you can access its eZine version for free, once you become a subscriber of LFY. You can subscribe to the print version of the magazine by visiting this link: <http://goo.gl/shxyE>

This would give you access to the magazine online, even before it hits the newsstands!

...and the print version overseas

I am extremely thankful to LFY for introducing me to FOSS. I wish I could get the print version of the magazine in Canada. I really miss it here :-(. Could you help me out?

—Kamaljit Singh,
via <http://www.facebook.com/LinuxForYou>

ED: We are pleased to know that LFY has helped you. You can subscribe to the print version by visiting this subscription link: <http://goo.gl/shxyE>

You can then click on the 'Broad' tab in the LFY section and then follow the subsequent instructions that appear. As a subscriber, you will also be able to access the eZine version of the magazine, for free, wherever you are!

LFY Facebook should have more Linux!

I am a regular reader of LFY and its posts on Facebook. I feel that in recent times, on Facebook, LFY has been giving more importance to Android, tablets, phones, etc. Although all the posts are interesting, the focus should be more on Linux; after all, that is the essence of the magazine, isn't it? :-)

I would request that you post more useful Linux related information rather than the gossip from the tech world.

—Vyshakh P V,
via <http://www.facebook.com/LinuxForYou>

ED: Thanks for sharing your concerns with us! We will definitely keep in mind your suggestions :-). Certainly, having more Linux-centric posts would be beneficial to not only you, but the entire LFY Facebook community.

A pat on the back for authors!

For QT:

I am a regular reader of LFY. I read the article 'Developing Applications on QT (Part 1)' published in the January 2012 issue. It was written extremely well. I gained a rather good understanding of QT after reading it. Thank you so much. I request you to continue the series, since it is really helpful.

—Chaitanya,
chaitanyach444@gmail.com

I am a subscriber of LFY. I really like the articles, 'Developing Applications on QT' that were carried in the last two issues, i.e., January and February 2012 issues of the magazine. Since I am a beginner, I would like to enhance my knowledge of QT. Could you suggest some websites or books that would help me do so?

—Nikhil Patil,
nvpatil123@gmail.com