

YOU SAID IT

On changing the name of your magazine!

I have always been an avid reader of LINUX For You and it now appears that the magazine is to be renamed Open Source For You. Can you please update me about this?

ED: Thanks for writing to us. In an effort to meet the ever-broadening scope of open source technology, we decided to rename our publication. While the core concept and content of the magazine will continue to be as relevant and useful as ever, this change would mean exploring open source technology beyond Linux.

Linux is a major part of the open source world but the latter has now evolved to represent a whole lot more. The changed name will reflect the constantly changing times in the world of open source technology.

The death of Kenneth Gonsalves came as a shock

I am a regular reader of your magazine and have contributed a few articles over the years. Picking up the September issue, I was startled to read the tribute to Kenneth Gonsalves—one of the main reasons for my buying the copy. It is really sad that we have lost one of our finest and most active workers in the open source community. I used to go through his column 'Foss Is Fun' in LFY and it still seems unbelievable that he is no more. Everyone in the community is definitely going to miss him.

ED: Thanks for writing in and sharing your feelings about what we all feel is a loss to the open source community. The sudden demise of Mr Gonsalves came as a shock to our team as well, and the tribute to him was a way of expressing our sense of loss. Yes, he definitely will be missed. May his soul rest in peace.

Kudos to the team

I was really excited when I got the news that a tip I'd shared was published in the September 2012 issue of your magazine. The team is doing a remarkable job in promoting open source software. LFY has been a great resource for learners—the tips and articles that you publish are really valuable and helpful for those wishing to continue on their journey through open source. All the very best for your future endeavours and I wish you all the success in the years to come.
