Here comes the Indian Linux tablet—PrithV!

The price war is getting intense. Wishtel has launched its PrithV tablet for Rs 3,300 only, which is just slightly higher than the new price for Aakash. Commenting on the launch, Milind Shah, Wishtel chief executive officer, said that the tablet was designed and manufactured in India to prove a point. He added, "We wanted to show that India can manufacture a $50 product." The basic version of the PrithV tablet will be made available at Rs 3,300 (including taxes), and the one with higher configurations will be priced at Rs 5,000. PrithV has a 17.7-cm (7-inch) LCD screen and comes with an 800 MHz processor. It supports 85 languages, which include 23 Indian languages.

Ambrane introduces an Android ICS-based mini laptop

Ambrane, one of the many tablet PC makers in the country, has unveiled its mini laptop. The device has a 17.7-cm (7-inch) capacitive touch display with a resolution of 800 x 480 pixels, and runs Android 4.0 (Ice Cream Sandwich). The device is powered by 1.2 GHz and 1 GB RAM, which makes this mini laptop a powerful device for all. It sports a 0.3 MP camera, which allows voice calling on Skype. The Ambrane offers connectivity options like Wi-Fi, USB, etc. It is backed up by a 3,000 mAh battery and has an internal memory of 8 GB. This laptop offers all the features of big laptops in a smaller form factor – so though called a 'mini laptop', it's huge when it comes to its configuration and features.
