

Figure 2: Balanced approach

a period of adjustment and synchronisation. During this phase, workflows might need to be modified to accommodate the AI solution, and vice versa. However, with patience and strategic planning, this period of adjustment leads to a stable integration, where the benefits of the AI solution become clear and measurable.

The key, from my perspective, is maintaining a clear vision of both the short-term and long-term impacts of these innovations. Innovation cannot be bracketed into a one-size-fits-all approach. Instead, it requires a commitment to an iterative development process, where quick wins are celebrated as milestones towards longer-term transformational goals. This approach not only ensures the sustainability of the AI initiative but also keeps the focus firmly on the business and revenue implications. A quick matrix that I started using to understand from organisations what would make sense to strike the balance is shown in Figure 2.

In discussions with clients, I emphasise the importance of this balanced approach. It's crucial to select use cases that not only promise to disrupt and improve current workflows but also align with the organisation's strategic objectives and capacity for change. By doing so, we can navigate the initial disruption to achieve a harmonious integration of AI technologies, ultimately realising their substantial ROI.

As I look forward, the journey with open source LLMs is far from complete. The key lies in maintaining a balance—between exploring new frontiers of technology and grounding these explorations in strategic, sustainable practices that yield real value. This balance is not just a goal but a guiding principle for navigating the future of AI, ensuring that as we move forward, we do so with purpose, foresight, and a commitment to leveraging technology in ways that are transformative, ethical, and ultimately, beneficial for all. END 🐧

🔗 Reference

- <https://www.marketsandmarkets.com/industry-news/Generative-AI-Breach-Openai-Takes-Action-Bug-Patched>

👤 By: Jaydeep Chakrabarty

The author is a contributor to the open source community and an application security evangelist for the last 15+ years. He works as head of Generative AI R&D and Engagement Lead, at Thoughtworks Technologies India and Middle East.