

Simplifying the Complexities of Agriculture with IoT

The Internet of Things can be of immense help in increasing the sustainability and productivity of agriculture. Data generated by IoT based drones and soil sensors can help farmers make informed decisions about the irrigation and sowing of crops, among other things. Amazon offers a range of services for IoT device management as well as data collection and analysis, which can be used by farmers to build a range of agricultural applications and solutions.

