

YOU SAID IT

More content for non-IT readers

I have been reading your magazine since the last few years. The company I work in is in the manufacturing industry. Similarly, your subscribers' database may have more individuals like me from companies that are not directly related to the IT industry.

Currently, your primary focus is on technical matters, and the magazine carries articles written by skilled technical individuals, so OSFY is really helpful for open source developers. However, you also have some non-IT subscribers like us, who can understand that something great is available in the open source domain, which they can deploy to reduce their IT costs. But, unfortunately, your magazine does not inform us about open source solutions providers.

I request you to introduce the companies that provide end-to-end IT solutions on open source platforms including thin clients, desktops, servers, virtualisation, embedded customised OSs, ERP, CRM, MRP, emails and file servers, etc. Kindly publish relevant case studies, with the overall cost savings and benefits. Just as you feature job vacancies, do give us information about the solutions providers I mentioned above.

ED: Thank you for your valuable feedback. We do carry case studies of companies deploying open source, from time to time. We also regularly carry a list of different solutions providers from different open source sectors. We will surely take note of your suggestion and try to continue carrying content that interests non-IT readers too.

Requesting an article on Linux server migration

I am glad to receive my first copy of OSFY. I have a suggestion to make: if possible, please include an article on migrating to VMware (from a Linux physical server to VMware ESX). Also, do provide an overview of some open source tools (like Ghost for Linux) to take an image of a physical Linux server.

ED: It's great to hear from you. We will definitely cover the topics suggested by you in one of our forthcoming issues. Keep reading our magazine. And do feel free to get in touch with us if you have any such valuable feedback.

A request for the Backtrack OS to be bundled on the DVD

I am a huge fan of Open Source For You. Thank you for bundling the Ubuntu DVD with the May 2014 issue. Some of my team members and I require the Backtrack OS. Could you provide this in your next edition? I am studying information sciences for my undergrad degree. Please suggest the important programming languages that I should become proficient in.

ED: Thanks for writing in to us. We're pleased to know that you liked the DVD. Backtrack is no longer being maintained. The updated version for penetration testing is now known as 'Kali Linux' and we bundled it with the April 2014 issue of OSFY. For career related queries, you can refer to older OSFY issues or you can find related articles on www.opensourceforu.com

Overseas subscriptions

Previously, I used to get the copies of LINUX For You/ Open Source For You and Electronics For You from local book stores but, lately, none of them carry these magazines any more. So how can I get the copies of all these magazines in Malaysia, and where can I get previous issues too?

ED: Thank you for reaching out to us. Currently, we do not have any reseller or distributor in Malaysia for news stand sales, but you can always subscribe to the print edition or the e-zine version of the magazines. You can find the details of how to subscribe to the print editions on www.pay.efyindia.com and for the e-zine version, please go to www.ezines.efyindia.com
