

Get stylish with Zebronic's wireless mouse

For all those who feel like replacing that boring mouse that came bundled with the computer, the Zebronic Totem 2 wireless optical mouse can be a good option. And if you are a tech buff who has a fetish for style, the wireless mouse can bowl you over with its chic looks. The Zebronic Totem 2 wireless optical mouse comes with its own nano receiver that goes unobtrusively into a standard USB port, providing a smooth, interference-free range of up to 10 metres for the mouse.

Switchable between 800/1200/1600 DPI, its fine resolution makes it suited for the most critical of tasks, or for use in gaming, design studios or, simply, for everyday work. The Totem 2 has four buttons (including the DPI switch). A simple plug-and-play device, it works without the need for any installation or software CD on major operating systems like Windows-XP/Vista/7/8. Alkaline batteries are included in the package.

Priced at Rs 499, which includes a warranty of one year, the mouse is available at major IT accessories markets, retail outlets as well as the Zebronic e-commerce site www.moneyvasool.com. Rajesh Doshi, co-founder and director, Purchase and Marketing at Top Notch Infotronics, shares, "The wireless mouse is designed for those who wish to up their style quotient in an affordable manner."
