

"We, at ESDS, are working on offering storage-as-a-service to end users on a pay-per-use model. One can put any volume of data on to cloud storage and pay based on the volume, without worrying about the ROI. We are thinking along the lines of a managed storage service model, which could measurably deliver a uniform level of service maintained under a specialised network infrastructure, while assuring our users that their data is in safe hands. For us, storage is not a product, but a continual service."

Q What are the trends in cloud accessibility?

The cloud has come to mean access anytime from anywhere. This access is to your data, applications and operations. To bring eNlight Cloud (an IaaS) closer to its users, ESDS Software Solution Pvt Ltd has come up with an Android mobile application which lets its users control their hosted cloud infrastructure with their fingertips. With access to such a cloud from the mobile, users can create and manage their virtual machine operating systems. With the app, they can also monitor their machine's health and easily take scalability decisions. With the advent of the cloud and its availability on the mobile, the service delivery time has dropped considerably. On eNlight Cloud, users can provision a new application or operating system image within minutes, instead of hours, thus making the cloud pocket-friendly.

Q What is ESDS Software Solution Pvt Ltd aiming to achieve in the current financial year?

ESDS Software Solution Pvt Ltd, being a leader in the group of fastest growing IT companies based in the UK, USA and India, is aiming at expanding its data centre footprint by building multiple cloud-enabled data centres across the globe. In India, we are aiming at upgrading our network infrastructure by starting new data centres in Mumbai, Delhi and Bengaluru this year. By adding more capacity in these key locations, we aim at positioning ourselves to deliver ultra-low latency and high speed network, hosting and IT services to organisations.
