

YOU SAID IT

surprise, this time, I found only one DVD, and no CD. I wanted to find out whether the CD has got lost in transit or did the May issue of LFY carry only the DVD?

ED: Thanks for sharing your concern with us.

I think you missed reading our message on Page 8 of the LFY May 2011 edition (refer to 'You Said It'), which clearly states that we have discontinued the LFY CD owing to the recent increase in packaging costs. As a consequence, we could look at continuing with the practice of bundling the CD only if we increased the cover price of the magazine, which we do not wish to do at this juncture. We hope we have the support of LFY's ardent readers, such as you, regarding this decision.

A pat on the back and a suggestion regarding article sequels

 I have been a regular reader of LFY magazine since 2007. Thank you very much for coming out with this excellent magazine, which publishes great content, every month. I particularly like the 'Linux Device Drivers' article that is featured under the 'Developers' section. It is simply great! A special thanks to the author, Anil Kumar Pugalía. I think the May 2011 issue of LFY did not carry the next part of this article. It would be good if you do not discontinue any of the ongoing series. It disappoints readers who eagerly await the subsequent articles.

Another concern is regarding my contribution to the Tips and Tricks section of LFY. I have submitted many tips via linuxforu.com. But none of them have got published so far. It would be good if you let me know the reason for not publishing the tips so that I could correct my mistakes and improve my submissions.

ED: Thanks for these words of appreciation. We are glad you like reading the magazine and have been supporting it since 2007.

As regards the 'Linux Device Drivers' article, we will convey your words of appreciation to the author. I think you missed noticing that Part 6 of the article series appeared in the May edition, on Page 77.

Regarding the submission of tips, we would like to apprise you that we receive a vast number of tips every month. Those selected form part of a pipeline that's lined up to be published month after month. So, keep reading LFY; hopefully, you may find your contributions in one of the forthcoming editions of the magazine.

 I have been reading LFY for the last two years. The content of the magazine and that of the CD and DVD is quite useful. However, I have a suggestion to make. Here, I would like to bring up one point regarding the articles that you publish in parts. Could you include some details of the previously published parts like the month it appeared and information like '...the April 2011 edition has Part 5 of the 'Linux Device Drivers' article; March 2011 has Part 4,' etc, so that it is easier for readers to figure out in which month or edition the previous parts of that series of articles appeared.

ED: Thanks for the suggestion with regard to the articles published as a series. The practice will indeed be helpful, especially in cases where the series continuity has been broken. We will try and implement it with effect from the next edition.

Regarding the openLDAP series

 I have been an LFY subscriber from the last one and a half years. Thanks a lot to the LFY team for publishing well-written and useful articles. I miss reading the series on OpenLDAP from Varad Gupta. Could you provide some URLs for further study on OpenLDAP?

ED: Dear Rushabh, we shared your request with Varad Gupta, the author of the OpenLDAP series. He has confirmed that he will resume writing the next part of the series from the July 2011 edition. According to the author, there have been significant changes in the new version of OpenLDAP and you can expect the next few articles to focus on these changes.
