

YOU SAID IT

ED: Thanks a lot for writing to us. Your words of appreciation will encourage and motivate us further to make the magazine even better. Thanks again! As regards your suggestion to include a puzzle based on the content included, we will surely evaluate this idea and if found feasible, will include a quiz based on stories published in an edition. Please do keep reading the magazine and sharing your valuable suggestions with us.

Regarding devices that run on Linux

 I have been a regular reader of LFY magazine for five to six years now. The articles are all very good and informative. The CDs and DVDs shipped with the magazine have offered me access to new distributions and versions of popular distros. Thanks to the LFY team for all this!

I have one request. I am looking to buy a laptop (to replace my desktop at home). There are not many laptops that come with Linux, or I should say, without Windows. I know there are a few such laptops available in the market, but it is very difficult to find specific details such as: where these laptops are available in India; their specifications; and whether all the hardware in these devices works with Linux. It would be great if you can publish an article in which you review a few of these laptops, including details on the performance of a popular Linux distribution on these machines. It would be great if the article also lists the places where these machines are available, their price and other specifications.

I know that these are not the kind of articles that appear in your magazine. But as a Linux and FOSS enthusiast, I want to run Linux on all my hardware (laptop, phone, etc). It would be great if LFY can help its readers choose the right hardware that runs Linux, perfectly.

ED: Our team feels gratified by your interest in the magazine and by your words of appreciation. We are really glad to know that you find the magazine informative. As regards the article that you have proposed, we would surely try and come up with something on the subject in a forthcoming edition of LFY. However, in the meantime, I hope you have taken note of the recent inclusion of a new feature on open source gadgets, which appears in the last segment of the magazine. You may find useful information on the latest Linux/OSS laptops and phones that are available in the market. Hope this helps.

A pat on the back and a pointer to a typo

 First of all, thank you very much for this wonderful magazine and the nice articles you feature, month after month. I have been your regular reader and feel very happy about the way the magazine has shaped up over time.

With the intention of improving the magazine, I wish to bring to your attention a typographical error that I observed in the article 'Delegate Proxy Server....' published on page 94 of the LFY March 2011 edition.

What was printed: `gunzip linux64-dg.gz`
 && `chmod -x linux64-dg.gz`

What is correct: `gunzip linux64-dg.gz`
 && `chmod -x linux64-dg`

I would request the LFY team to go through a stringent verification process to avoid such mistakes. Those who are comfortable in Linux may quickly notice the typo, and make the correction before using the command, but I hope you will understand how difficult it would be for beginners — if there are typos in executable commands.

I would also request the author of the said article (Ajitabh Pandey) to come up with more articles. His experience is amply demonstrated by how he explains concepts in such a beautiful way.

Once again, I would like to thank the editor of the magazine for publishing wonderful content.

ED: Dear Balu, thanks a lot for being such a passionate follower of the magazine and also for your words of praise. We are also grateful to you for pointing out the typo error. We regret it and in order to track the occurrence of the error, we referred your feedback to the author and we share his response.

Ajitabh Pandey: "Thanks for pointing out the typo, Balu. I did review the article twice, yet, I must take the blame for not having noticed the typo. As regards your suggestion for more articles, there are a few in the pipeline on the subject of automation, but owing to my current schedule, I am afraid I won't be able to commit any time line. Once again, thanks for your active and genuine involvement!"

Regarding the LINUX For You CD

With effect from this edition, we have discontinued the LFY CD. This issue comes bundled with only a DVD. This is mainly because of the recent increase in packaging costs, as specified by the postal authorities. As a consequence, we could continue with the practice of bundling the CD only if we increased the cover price of the magazine—which is something that we do not wish to do at this juncture.

As a way forward, we are evaluating the option of bundling a multi-layered DVD with the magazine, which will enable us to feature a lot more content that a CD and DVD, put together. Till that happens, we request our readers to kindly bear with us. Best regards
