LFY—a perfect companion to carry on vacations!

I recently had a long spell of holidays on account of Ramadan and the Ganesha festival. I took advantage of the time I had and took all my old LFY editions along with me on my vacation to browse through the articles that I had missed over the last few months.

I would like to know if there is any way I could read the LFY editions from 2008 till 2011.

Please let me know the procedure.

ED: To buy any of the older editions (print) of LFY, kindly send a request to support@efyindia.com with a cc to lfyedit@efyindia.com, specifying the editions that you would like to buy.

You can also start buying the e-zine version of the old editions of the magazine from ezine.lfy.com. The facility has been recently launched. You can get all issues from January 2010 to the current one, online. The earlier issues will be updated shortly.

You can also refer to most of LFY's content at linuxforu.com for free.

Hope this helps. Do let us know if you have any other query.

Tips to learn more about Linux and open source

I am new to the world of open source. I have been reading LINUX For You for the last three months.

I like the You Said It feature of the magazine a lot, as I get useful information and updates about the magazine and its content from here.

I have been using Windows for a long time. Although I don't know much about Linux, Ubuntu, and other open source OSs, my interest in the open source world has increased a lot, of late, after reading LFY.

Now, I want to learn more about Linux and Ubuntu. I have many friends who are also interested in learning and using open source software. Can you please suggest how we can learn the basics of Linux and open source, and know more about Ubuntu?

ED: It's great to know that the magazine has motivated you to explore and learn more about Linux and open source software.

To build your understanding on Linux and open source, you can refer to websites like tldp.org

To know more about Ubuntu, you can join Ubuntu-related forums and post your queries there. There is a lot of literature available on the Internet for newbies in the form of tutorials. You can refer to that as well.

You can also post your queries on the Facebook page of LFY (<http://www.facebook.com/LinuxForYou>) where you will find a community of over 90,000 LFY fans comprising open source professionals, geeks, and enthusiasts, who may also address your queries.

Hope this helps.
