Evernote hacked; resets passwords of users

Evernote, the Web-based note sharing service, fell prey to the dark forces of the cyber world. Evernote has said that it has reset the passwords of its 50 million users because it was hacked. The hackers have breached Evernote's computer network and have managed to access details of the users including their user names, email addresses and encrypted passwords.

According to a Reuters report, Ronda Scott, spokeswoman for Evernote, sent out an email saying, "The attack follows a similar pattern to other cyber attacks on Internet-based companies in recent weeks."

The company informed its users about the attack on its website stating, "In our security investigation, we have found no evidence that any of the content you store in Evernote was accessed, changed or lost. We also have no evidence that any payment information for Evernote Premium or Evernote Business customers was accessed."

However, no information on how many accounts have been compromised could be gathered. The spokeswoman also was tight-lipped on whether the hackers have unscrambled encrypted passwords.

GNOME and Kylin are now official Ubuntu flavours

Here is some good news for Ubuntu enthusiasts. Ubuntu GNOME and UbuntuKylin have finally been officially designated as Ubuntu flavours by the Ubuntu Technical board. For the uninitiated, Ubuntu GNOME 3 delivers GNOME 3 experience on Ubuntu and UbuntuKylin offers a fully customised Chinese user experience on Ubuntu 13.04.

The official designation means that now developers of the two flavours will get access to Ubuntu's build infrastructure. The flavours can now be managed as part of the Ubuntu project instead of an unsupported fork.

In October 2012, Ubuntu GNOME was first unveiled along with Ubuntu 12.10. Moreover, it is the only formal release of the Ubuntu GNOME distro besides the 12.10.1 update. Now the next development release can be expected along with the 13.04 final beta.

Besides its Chinese language support, UbuntuKylin will also extend China-centric changes to the Unity environment. The changes will include "...making
