

Linux Maintainer Greg K-H Talks About What Keeps Him Busy!

Greg Kroah Hartman, fondly known as Greg K-H, is one of the most important people working on the Linux kernel. He is the Linux stable kernel maintainer and is a Linux Foundation Fellow. No, he doesn't comment the way Linus Torvalds does, but he makes some really important statements. Recently, he clarified 'once and for all' that Linux 3.8 is 'NOT' a long term kernel. Queries pouring in day and night regarding Linux 3.8 were addressed by one official statement from Hartman.

Diksha P Gupta from Open Source For You caught up with him to understand his views on Linux 3.8, kernel development and his experiences with open source technology. Excerpts:

Greg Kroah Hartman,
Linux stable kernel maintainer

