

Domo launches its first keyboard

Keyboard users have a reason to rejoice. Computer peripherals maker Domo has launched its first keyboard, the MagicKey K36, which is compatible with all versions of Linux, Android, Windows and Mac. It has been designed for both gentle and rough usage, with a durable key structure. The main features include 103 keys; a sturdy, slim, comfortable and elegant design; and soft-feel keys that are easy to read. The keyboard boasts of being based on a spill-resistant design. The K36 has high performance keys, and occupies less space than other bulky keyboards. With its ergonomically placed keys, the MagicKey K36 is ideal for those who want to use the keyboard with both Windows and Android systems.

Mazher Shaikh, business development manager at Domo Gadgets Pvt Ltd, says, "Domo's MagicKey K36 is designed to be compatible with multiple operating systems and to fulfil the requirements of all users - whether you're a touch typist or a 'hunt and pecker'. After tasting success in tablets and accessories, we are glad to enter the PC peripherals market with our range of keyboards," he added.

Zebronics enters the tablet market

At a time when brands are scrambling to enter the budget-tablet segment, Zebronics has also entered the fray. Top Notch Infotronics, known for its Zebronics brand of computers, consumer electronics and communications products and accessories, has entered the Indian tablet market, with the introduction of its Zepad series of tablets. One of them is Zepad 7T100, which is powered by a Cortex A8 1 GHz processor and incorporates voice-calling through an in-built SIM-card slot, along with other lifestyle features such as Wi-Fi connectivity and a USB OTG cable to act as a host, allowing other USB devices like a USB flash drive, mouse, or keyboard to be attached to it.

Rajesh Doshi, a director of Top Notch Infotronics, says, "We aim to capitalise on this consumer trend with an array of tablet offerings that combine quality hardware and production values with great content and seamless usability for an engaging user experience."
