

YOU SAID IT

Why OSFY must be on your shelf

I subscribed to OSFY almost 10 months back, and I must say I am very happy and satisfied with this magazine. Your broad focus makes it a magazine that both developers and systems administrators can learn from. I have to add that subscribing to your magazine has been like making a small investment, which got me a 10-fold return. Thanks and keep up your great work. I wrote a small article (<http://www.theunixschool.com/2013/07/linux-for-you-magazine-for-open-source.html>) asking subscribers to my blog to subscribe to OSFY. Here are some points from the write-up.

"Five reasons why OSFY is a must on your shelf:

- 1. Knowledge about the Linux world: This magazine is from where you get a lot of sound knowledge on Linux, within a short span of time. Besides, the articles always come with a lot of explanation.
- 2. The importance of open source: There will be a day when every electronic item we use will have some element of open source technology. Hence, it is very important for us to have the complete know-how about it. OSFY helps you get this know-how.
- 3. Hot technologies in the market: Technologies like cloud computing, Big Data, Hadoop, etc. all of which find a mention in our day to day life, are well covered in this magazine. You will always find dedicated articles on the latest market offerings in OSFY. Getting exposed to new technologies will help us grow in this competitive market. Also, there is lot of content on Android.
- 4. Career options: OSFY has a section devoted to career options. This section takes up a hot career option in the market and talks about it in detail—its scope, the advantages of the technology, the different training institutes linked to the domain and, of course, the salary range for freshers who want to get into this segment. This section is very helpful for every techie, especially for those who are trying to shift to a new domain.
- 5. Utilities: All developers or sys admins work on some utility or the other. And they are only aware about the utilities they have come across. In OSFY, you will see articles on quite a lot of utilities. Though we may not need to know too much about them, a basic understanding of important ones will always hold us in good stead. Also, with every edition, you get a CD of one of the Linux distros. Learn more at: <http://www.theunixschool.com/2013/07/linux-for-you-magazine-for-open-source.html#sthash.uesAU2y4.dpuf>
In a nutshell, you always feel you are in sync with the open source world, which is significant in today's competitive market."

Hope more people benefit from your magazine.

ED: We are indeed pleased to receive this mail from such an avid reader. And it makes us even happier to know that you have asked your blog subscribers to get connected to OSFY. Thank you so much! We are passionate about promoting FOSS and the technologies associated with it through OSFY. And we are happy to know that you are helping us in our endeavour. We value your suggestions and we earnestly hope that we will be able to do even better with such inspiring mails from our readers. Please keep sending us your valuable feedback.

Liked reading the interview with the IBM head honcho

Diksha P Gupta's interview with Dipankar Sarma of IBM throws up some interesting views. I am sure that the concerned authorities, especially in Tamil Nadu, will take sufficient steps to spread awareness and build up open source skill sets in many more colleges, as this will help many companies to recruit people with open source skills. Second, the tips on Thunderbird in the July issue of OSFY (Tips & Tricks) are interesting and useful. However, the writer could have mentioned that the Thunderbird Profile folder at `/home/<username>/.thunderbird` is very important and, while copying, one should take care not to delete it. If it is deleted, Thunderbird has to be reconfigured again.

Hope my suggestions help the other techies around.

ED: It's always a pleasure to receive your mails. Thanks a lot for the great feedback and your insightful tip on Thunderbird. We will convey your words of appreciation to our author Diksha P Gupta. Keep sending us your views.

Not receiving the renamed magazine

I am a regular subscriber of your magazine. It's been a long time now since the name of my favourite magazine has been changed to Open Source For You but, unfortunately, I still receive the magazine with the LINUX For You masthead. Can I know what I need to do to get my monthly copy with the new name on it?

—Prashant Kumar Rai, pk.kumarprashant@yahoo.com

ED: Thanks for sharing your concerns with us. We understand your point, but there are postal rules that we have to adhere to for some time. These will be sorted out in another 2-3 months and then you can have your favourite magazine with the changed name. Hope this is fine with you.
