

YOU SAID IT

A request for an article

I am aware that Linux For You is now Open Source for You, and that this magazine updates us on the latest open source technologies and not just Linux. I have learnt a lot through the magazine—about the fastest growing technologies like the cloud and virtualisation, and would like to thank you for the same.

I also want to learn more about Apache Tomcat for Linux administration. Could you publish an article on the topic?

ED: Thanks a lot for the feedback. We cherish our readers' views and with every edition, we try to bring out an improved edition of the magazine. It really makes us feel good to know that OSFY was instrumental in enhancing your knowledge on open source technologies. We have circulated the topic requested by you among our pool of authors. Do keep reading the magazine, as we are trying to focus more on such topics. Feel free to continue sending us your feedback.

A request for the contents of previous issues of OSFY

I am a regular reader of OSFY and have subscribed to the magazine for more than seven years (since its LFY days). I have kept all the copies and find them very useful for my reference as well as for teaching. I would like to request you to kindly provide an online (or maybe in some forthcoming edition) contents list/index of all the previous editions. This could be put online annually or as a collection. And it will definitely help all the readers to refer to previous editions for any particular topic.

ED: Thanks for your feedback. We are glad to know that the magazine has helped you and are overwhelmed to know that you have kept all the copies of the magazine. We understand that your suggestion can be very useful to people like you. We already have such a platform that allows our readers to check what was published in the past issues of OSFY. You can go to <http://lfy.ifyindia.com/archives.asp?id=13> and search for the published article. It has features to search by the name of the article, author, month or year of publication. The search result will display the publication date with the page number.

An article on messaging solutions

I have been a regular subscriber of OSFY and appreciate the efforts of your team to write about open source technologies that can be adopted at the enterprise level. In fact, at work, we've successfully deployed an open source CMS for a corporate learning portal based on inputs we received from your magazine.

We're looking forward to an article on open source messaging solutions and, if possible, an article on implementing a recommended open source messaging server which has a PC/mobile client. Looking forward to your positive feedback.

ED: Thanks a lot for the feedback. It feels great when readers tell us how they benefited from our magazine. We have carried an article on Apache ActiveMQ in the November 2015 issue of OSFY, which can be of help. We have also circulated the topic requested by you among our authors and will come up with an article in one of the forthcoming issues of OSFY. END

Errata: OSFY December 2015

Errata 1: In the article titled 'Using App Inventor: An App to Create Question Sets with Voice Input Answers' under the 'Developers' section (page 65-69, OSFY December 2015), part 1 and 2 of Figure 5 and part 2 and 3 of Figure 6 were not carried by error. The full article with all the images can be read at <http://opensourceforu.ifytimes.com/2015/12/an-app-to-create-question-sets-with-voice-input-answers/>

Errata 2: In the article titled 'Using Open Source Software on Windows' in the 'For U & Me' section (OSFY December 2015), the line '...one well-known commercial software that is not too costly is LibreOffice Base' at the bottom of the first column on page 86 is incorrect. The words 'commercial software' should be replaced by 'free and open source software'.
