

at the network edge close to the provider network to accelerate claims processing. This hybrid AI approach reduces cloud GPU costs and improves first-pass claim resolution rates.

Multi-cloud bursting: This helps to handle peak claims volumes. It provides elastic scalability, ensuring claims are processed within regulatory timelines even during peak times.

Sovereign cloud controls: This solution for a claims platform adopts the sovereign hybrid cloud model, which helps to protect PHI and national data. As the company operates across multiple countries, it must comply to data sovereignty laws as well as cloud and AI development acts in the EU.

Disaster recovery: Claims adjudication is mission-critical, and downtime directly impacts providers, members, and regulatory SLAs. The model needs to adopt an active-active hybrid DR model. This ensures zero downtime, uninterrupted provider payments, and compliance with CMS timelines.

The hybrid cloud claims management architecture helps in achieving:

- Zero downtime claims processing
- Faster adjudication through edge-based AI
- Elastic scalability during peak claim periods
- Full compliance with national and international data sovereignty laws
- Lower operational costs

Benefits of hybrid cloud adoption

A hybrid cloud helps enterprises increase flexibility to deliver IT resources, improve disaster recovery capabilities, and lower IT capital expenses. The other benefits are:

Business acceleration: Helps speed up business processes, supports collaboration, and provides cost-effective solutions to free up IT budgets for innovative, revenue-generating projects.

Cost reduction: Helps in reducing operating and capital costs, and improves performance, productivity and business agility via a flexible, scalable solution. Enterprises can choose the applications to move across the clouds and on-premises based on their enterprise requirements.

Flexibility: Enterprises can choose the optimal environment for each workload based on performance, security, and cost. They can easily migrate their workloads to or from their infrastructure and a public cloud whenever necessary.

Cost optimisation: A hybrid cloud model allows users to choose from the environment where they want to run their workloads most cost-effectively. By running AI inference on local hardware (CPUs/NPU), enterprises can save up to 40% compared to renting high-end GPU instances in the public cloud.

Reliability: In this model, if one cloud goes down, some functionality will still be available to users from the other deployed clouds. Generally, one public cloud can be used as backup for another cloud.

Resilience: In a hybrid model, an enterprise can run applications redundantly in both environments, i.e., public and private clouds. Thus, components of a single workload can interoperate and run in both environments. It enables an active-active setup where workloads run simultaneously across environments, ensuring zero downtime during hyperscaler outages.

Risk management: A hybrid cloud helps to mitigate risks with a single, unified, cybersecurity solution.

Managing legacy systems: A hybrid cloud can bridge the gap between legacy and new systems, leading to major cost savings.

Scalability: Applications can scale infinitely by adopting a hybrid cloud strategy while keeping the core business data secure through on-premises hosting. When an enterprise's demand exceeds the capacity of the physical data centre, it can transfer the data to the public cloud to access extra capacity and scale.

Disaster recovery and business continuity: Hybrid clouds enable enterprises to create robust disaster recovery plans by replicating data and applications across multiple environments.

Hybrid cloud is now a popular IT strategy, enabling enterprises to migrate workloads, speed up application development, adopt containers and microservices, and ensure portability across platforms. Enterprises of any size can adopt it to ensure cost-efficient business delivery with zero downtime. END 🐧

Acknowledgements

The authors would like to thank Tricon Solutions LLC and Gspann Technologies, Inc., for giving the required time and support in many ways when this article was being written.

By: Dr Gopala Krishna Behara and Narumanchi Sree Keerthi

Dr Gopala Krishna Behara is an enterprise architect at Tricon IT Solutions. He has around 28 years of experience in the IT industry.

Narumanchi Sree Keerthi is a senior software engineer at Gspann Technologies, Inc. She has around 5 years of experience in the IT industry.

Disclaimer: The views expressed in this article are those of the authors. Tricon Solutions LLC and Gspann Technologies, Inc., do not subscribe to the substance, veracity or truthfulness of the said opinion.