Digisol launches Wi-Fi router based on EPON/GPON technology

Digisol, a subsidiary of Smartlink Holdings Ltd and a leading provider of networking products, has launched its new Wi-Fi router, the DG-GR1321.

The device is designed to meet the demand for FTTH (fibre to the home) and triple play services from fixed network or cable operators. It is based on Gigabit EPON/GPON technology, and comes with 802.11n Wi-Fi (2T2R), Layer 2/3 and high quality VoIP.

The router is reliable and easy to maintain, claim company sources. Fully compliant with technical regulations such as IEEE802.3ah, the DG-GR1321 supports plug-and-play and features like auto-detection, auto-configuration and auto firmware upgrades. It also supports NAT and firewall functions, along with the Ipv4 and Ipv6 dual stack.

Ideal for both offices and homes, the Digisol Wi-Fi routers are available online and at retail stores.

BenQ launches 4K UHD monitor

BenQ, a leading global manufacturer of displays, has recently launched the EL2870U, which the company claims is the first 4K Ultra High Definition (UHD) monitor with a 1ms response.

Specifically designed for eye care, the monitor features the High Dynamic Range (HDR) and Cinema HDR mode to increase the overall dynamic range between true black and bright white, duplicating what the human eye sees in the natural world.

With its 4K UHD resolution, ultra slim design and good functionality, company sources claim the monitor offers extraordinary clarity, enhancing the video performance.

The EL2870U offers an incredibly fast 1ms gray-to-gray (GTG) response time to ensure a more responsive and fluent gaming experience than a traditional 4K television. It also offers AMD's FreeSync technology, which eliminates image tearing and broken frames for fluid gaming.

Perfect for long hours of gaming without eye strain, the BenQ EL2870U monitor is available via online stores.
